Kaiser Permanente delivers on its commitment to increase access to outstanding care and convenience in Northern Virginia

To better serve our growing membership in Northern Virginia, we are pleased to announce the opening of the Alexandria Medical Center on Monday, April 1. This milestone marks the first of three new Virginia medical centers scheduled to open in 2019. The Alexandria Medical Center accommodates Kaiser Permanente's robust growth and the continuing demand for its top-rated, integrated approach to care delivery, which combines health care and health coverage in one convenient package.

Located at 3000 Potomac Avenue, the newly-constructed, 40,000-square-foot medical center offers a wide range of primary care and specialty care services, including adult and pediatric care, women's health, optometry and physical therapy. Additionally, the one-stop medical center also contains pharmacy, radiology and laboratory services.

"Kaiser Permanente will open three new medical centers in Virginia this year to provide nationally-recognized care to our members and jobs to our communities," said Kim Horn, regional president of Kaiser Permanente. "Through these facilities and our advanced telehealth capabilities, Kaiser Permanente delivers high quality care where, how and when our members want it. We are proud to provide our growing membership with local access to excellent care right here in Alexandria."

"Our patients expect the best of the best, and that's what our more than 1,500 Permanente physicians provide," said Richard McCarthy, MD, associate executive director of the Mid-Atlantic Permanente Medical Group, which provides care for Kaiser Permanente members in Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia. "Thanks to the exceptional training, experience and collaboration of our physicians, we earn the highest clinical quality ratings year after year. We are thrilled to bring our award-winning Permanente medicine to Alexandria."
